What are the basic building blocks or subunits of dna called. What are the building blocks of dna and rna called.

order of the A, T, G, and C nucleotides that make up your DNA is like a four-letter language that spells out instructions for how the cells in your body should operate. Your cells read the language or code given by the sequence of nucleotides in your DNA and carry out the instructions it contains. These instructions are responsible for all of your biological functions. Over 99.9% of human DNA is identical from person to person, meaning that it contains the same sequence of A, T, G, and C nucleotides and therefore the same instructions. In less than 0.1% of human DNA, the order of the nucleotides and the instructions that they provide can vary. For example, one person's DNA may spell out instructions for lower melanin, resulting in green or blue eyes, while another person's DNA may spell out instructions for higher melanin, resulting in brown eyes. Thus understanding the structure of DNA is an important part of understanding how genetic information is encoded, and how it is passed along from one generation to the next. Answer: Verified Hint: The DNA is made up of four types of molecules. These molecules are also called the base and they are attached to a sugar-phosphate backbone. DNA has four bases which are Adenine (A), Guanine (G), Cytosine (C), and Thymine (T). These bases pair across the two strands of the helix i.e Adenine pairs with Thymine, and Cytosine pairs with Guanine. Complete answer: The biological instructions that make a species unique are contained in Deoxyribonucleic acid. The instructions are passed from adult organisms to their offspring during reproduction. The building blocks of DNA are nucleotides. These nucleotides are made up of three parts - a phosphate group, a sugar group, and one of four types of nitrogen bases, the nucleotides linked together to form a strand of DNA, with the phosphate and sugar group. The nitrogen bases have four bases which are adenine (A), thymine (T), guanine (G), and cytosine (C). The patterns of these bases determine what biological instructions are stored in a DNA molecule. DNA is found in the nucleus of all eukaryotic organisms. A DNA molecule is very packaged and this form of DNA is called chromosomes. DNA is relaxed during replication, which helps to be copied. It also unwinds so that the instructions can be used to make proteins. DNA is in the form of compact chromosomes to allow transfer to new cells during cell division. The correct answer is, nitrogenous base, phosphate, and deoxyribose. Note: For organisms to survive, reproduce and develop DNA is important because it contains necessary instructions for all these processes. The sequences of each DNA consist of instructions to make the proteins to be known as a gene. Something went wrong. Wait a moment and try again. The deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) is a molecule that contains the biological instructions that make each species the only. The DNA, together with the instructions it contains, goes from adult organisms to their offspring during reproduction. In organisms called eukaryotes, the DNA is within a special use of the nucleus of the cell. Because the nucleus is very small, and because the organisms have many DNA molecules, each DNA molecule must be well packaged. This packaging form of DNA is called chromosome. During DNA replication, DNA unwinds so that it can be copied. At other times, in the cell cycle, the DNA is also relaxed so that its instructions can be used to make proteins and other biological processes. But during the cell division, the DNA is in its form of compact chromosome to allow transfer to new cells.
