If nothing else seems to work, then take the assistance of a virtual private network to change your location. From all the available options, Nord VPN would be an ideal pick. Some other VPNs that you can try are Express VPN, Pure VPN, IP Vanish, Hola VPN, etc. Nord will hide your device's present IP address and let you pick a desired server from its supported list. Nord VPN is extremely secure and will protect your phone from any malicious attack. You can change the location of your device from the available servers on its interface. The application is pretty easy to use and will not need a jailbroken device. Pros: Extremely secure and won't be detected by Pokemon Go No jailbreak needed. Cons: You can't drop your location pin wherever you want Would be restricted to the server's location Paid (only free trial version) More info: The final words: Now when you know about 7 different ways to do Pokemon Go spoofing on iOS, you can easily meet your requirements. As you can see, I have listed both iOS and desktop applications in this post with solutions for jailbroken and standard devices. Therefore, you can simply pick a preferred option for location spoofing on Pokemon Go on your iPhone. Though, if nothing else would work, then use a reliable VPN of your choice and be ready to catch as many Pokemon as you want! Pokémon GO involves moving about in the real world and catching your favorite Pokémons. You also cannot get free poke balls or hatch eggs without walking. The app uses your GPS feature to determine the distance you have moved down to one meter. What if you do not feel like moving from your current location? Well, an easy way to go about this is installing apps to spoof or mock your location. They fool the game app that you are actually moving, allowing you to unlock location-based features of the game. Fortunately, most of these apps are free and easy to use and do not leak your actual location. Learn how to play Pokémon GO without moving using these apps here. Part 1. What's New from Niantic Since the coronavirus outbreak, Niantic has made various changes to its playing policy to capture the new reality where social distancing is a necessity. It has also added new features that stationary players may find appealing. If you wonder how to play Pokémon GO without moving, here are the key changes that will enable you to do just that. It has postponed or cancelled most live events such as Safari Zones. It has reworked events such as Community Day and A Drive to Investigate to help enforce social distancing. They now support solo play. It has removed research tasks that you cannot complete at home. Players can buy a new PokeCoin bundle at the shop each week. It has increased daily rewards to 3X EXP and 3X Stardust when you get the first catch of the day. It has doubled the proximity radius that players need to interact in a gym. Players are not required to walk to earn Go Battle League Sets. Players can purchase remote Raid Battle Passes to play at any point in the map remotely. New changes are coming up to help players explore the game and support indoor activities such as running on the treadmill or cleaning. Part 2.
